In France, the first publications of the new DSM-IV (Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, fourth edition) were available in April 1994. As you know, there are many ways of assessing the same psychiatric disorders. Therefore, it is important to have a common language and a common classification system. This is why the World Health Organization (WHO) has developed the International Classification of Diseases (ICD), which is used all over the world. The ICD-10 (International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision) was published in 1992.
